How did Telok Ayer Street get its name? This curved road with quaint shophouses (16) on both sides used to face the sea, hence its name Telok Ayer, which means "bay water" in Malay.

Telok Ayer Street used to be the first landing point for immigrants to Singapore. (17) These people moved here to find work. Telok Ayer was one of the primary streets (18) designated by Raffles for the Chinese community. The buildings at Telok Ayer Street are very significant to the cultural history of Singapore. (19)

Tourists are welcome to take a trip down memory lane to uncover the history of (20) Telok Ayer. They will be enchanted by its rich history.

Explore the little-known farms in Singapore!

Written by Angela Chong

Farms? Do we have space for them? Surprisingly, even though less than one percent of Singapore's land area is dedicated to farming activities, there is an array of farms here. Whether you are looking for a family-friendly place to go on the weekends or a place to get away from the hustle and bustle, read on to find out more about some options that are truly a breath of fresh air.

Healthful Organic Farm

What are organic vegetables? How are they different? Find out at Healthful Organic Farm! The farm owners can give you a free guided tour to learn about organic methods of growing vegetables, watch vegetables being harvested, try your hand at harvesting, and finally, taste the fruits of your labour. Make fresh salad with the vegetables you have picked, and have it with other healthy snacks prepared by the farm's very own chef, with its very own fresh produce.

Tours are by appointment only. Visit www.healthful.sg to book a tour online at least three days in advance!

Tony's Goat Farm

Did you know you could drink goat's milk? If you have already tried imported goat's milk, you'll find that locally produced goat's milk which is fresh from the farm tastes so much better! Visit Tony's Goat Farm, Singapore's one and only goat farm, to give the best-tasting goat's milk a try! You will not be disappointed! You may choose to take a guided tour to pet the goats, watch them being milked, and have a go at milking them.

Freshly bottled goat's milk and handmade goat's milk soap are sold on the farm.

Opening hours: 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. daily

Admission fee: $5

Guided tours cost $2 per person. Each tour caters for up to 6 people.

Miko's Retreat

Perhaps you need a short break. Perhaps you have children who love animals. Farm stays at Miko's Retreat would be ideal weekend getaways!

The farm stays offer guests opportunities to interact with free-roaming animals and learn how a farm works. As buffet-style meals will be served daily, staff must be informed of special dietary needs. Guests have to stay for a minimum of 2 nights. To find out more or make a reservation, call 6410 4100. (Reservations must be made two days in advance.)

For each question from 21 to 28, shade your answer (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet

Have you ever spotted a shiny grey or silver insect scurrying across your book before? These insects <sup>(29)</sup> _____ called silverfish. They are thought to be one <sup>(30)</sup> _____ the oldest insects in the world. Many think that they were around 100 million years <sup>(31)</sup> _____ dinosaurs roamed the earth. Who would have thought that they would be older than dinosaurs?

Silverfish are nocturnal creatures. <sup>(32)</sup> _____ explains why they are usually spotted at night. Contrary <sup>(33)</sup> _____ the assumption that silverfish are harmful, they are not known to bite humans and there is no scientific evidence to suggest that silverfish are poisonous. However, they can trigger allergic reactions in some people. Unlike most insects, they shed their skin <sup>(34)</sup> _____ their entire adult lives. This process is called 'moulting'. Moulting causes them to leave behind scales, which resemble the husk of a bug. Unfortunately, some people are sensitive to the dust created <sup>(35)</sup> _____ the scales.

Although silverfish are not harmful to humans, they can damage your belongings. <sup>(36)</sup> _____ diet is rich in starches and protein. Thus, they eat anything that they can find. They will eat cereal, books, wallpaper and cardboard.

Harmless <sup>(37)</sup> _____ they may be silverfish are very difficult to eradicate. Their flat bodies and fast speed make them adept hidiers. Here are <sup>(38)</sup> _____ steps that you can take to make your house less attractive to the silverfish. Firstly, place food such as cereal in airtight containers. Next, use humidifiers in damp areas of your house. Lastly, seal all openings such as seams between walls and ceilings.

Have you ever wondered how you can declutter or organise your room or home? In recent years, the KonMari method has taken the world <sup>(51)</sup> storm.

The KonMari method is a system of simplifying and organising your home by throwing away physical items that do not bring joy to your life. The method was created by organising consultant Marie Kondo. Kondo has <sup>(52)</sup> a best-selling book titled 'The Life-Changing Magic of Tidying Up'. In her book, Kondo <sup>(53)</sup> you to clear your belongings by category rather than by room.

When using this method, you are actively choosing items that spark joy, and discarding what does not. The intention <sup>(54)</sup> the KonMari method is to end up with a clutter-free home that is better able to bring more joy and prosperity to your life. <sup>(55)</sup> you are tidying your things, she encourages you to visualise the life you want to live, to be less stressed. Any item that would not help you in your journey is not deserving of the <sup>(56)</sup> in your house.

KonMari teaches you to ask a simple <sup>(57)</sup> when you go about tidying up your house. For each item in your home, you should ask if it sparks joy. If not, get rid of it. Items that spark true joy would not always be practical. For instance, Kondo had an old T-shirt she had <sup>(58)</sup> from a shop many years ago. The shirt was old <sup>(59)</sup> she decided to keep it as it brought back good <sup>(60)</sup> from a time long gone. Many of her friends <sup>(61)</sup> at her decision as they could not believe that she would keep the worn, old shirt. Pertaining to these less-than-practical items, Kondo writes, "If you can say without a doubt that the item sparks joy, then <sup>(62)</sup> what other people think."

<sup>(63)</sup> are items that could bring you joy in the future, but not in the immediate future. For example, a sleeping bag that you used at a camp years ago might not spark joy as you do not need it for now. However, you may attend more <sup>(64)</sup> in the future. Thus, keeping <sup>(65)</sup> is a great idea. The KonMari method is a fantastic tool in decluttering as it can be applied to all parts of your life.

Mrs Soh was reading the newspaper when an advertisement caught her attention. The company, Robots on Wheels, had the perfect solution for her childcare woes. It was offering a free trial for a robot nanny that was able to take care of any child for up to eight hours a day.

"Let's give it a try!" Mrs Soh exclaimed to her husband as she pointed to the advertisement. Their only daughter, Hannah, was enrolling into Primary 1 and they had no one to take care of her once she returned from school. Mrs Soh was desperate. She needed someone to cook and monitor Hannah when she returned home from school. Both Mr and Mrs Soh worked long hours and they needed someone trustworthy to look after Hannah.

"Are you sure you would like a robot to look after Hannah? What happens if it catches fire when it gets overheated? I am sure a human will be a better caregiver than a robot," replied Mr Soh adamantly. Mr Soh looked at Hannah from the corner of his eye and she did not seem very enthusiastic about the idea too. "Maybe we should sign her up for the after-school care that is run by Mr Ong. There, she will be able to mingle with her peers. She will not be so lonely," Mr Soh added. Hannah's eyes lit up after hearing what her father had said.

"With a robot, I am able to monitor Hannah the way I want her to be monitored!" retorted Mrs Soh. Without much discussion, Mrs Soh took her mobile phone out and dialled the number on the advertisement. After talking to the sales representative, Mrs Soh gleefully announced that the robot nanny trial would start the next day. The whole deal sounded too good to be true.

The next morning, the technician delivered the robot. It was white and matronly-looking. Hannah stared at it with her mouth agape. It stood at a towering height of 1.8 m and it was the size of a refrigerator. It looked intimidating. The technician taught Mrs Soh how to charge the robot and programme it before leaving the house.

Mrs Soh instructed Hannah to press the start button. The robot lit up. Then, it boomed in a chirpy voice, "Welcome home. Master Edwin. I am pleased that you are home."

"Who is Master Edwin?" Hannah roared in amusement. Mr Soh shook his head at the robot disapprovingly.

Mrs Soh pressed the shutdown button and tried to programme it again. Quickly, she rebooted the robot and commanded it to cook macaroni soup. Without hesitation, it made its way to the kitchen. When it reached the entrance of the kitchen, it could not open the door and started going round and in circles as though it was dancing. Hannah laughed at the hilarious sight. Mr Soh analysed the situation, considered the competency of the new hire, and said, "I do not think it will be able to get through the door or cook a meal for Hannah when she comes home from school. I suggest you call the sales representative and ask him to remove the robot from our house." Mr Soh stared at the robot in horror as thick, black smoke escaped from the robot.

"I can't," Mrs Soh replied sheepishly as she pressed its shutdown button again. "I have to keep it for a month as I signed a one-month contract with the company or else I would have to pay a hefty penalty." While Mrs Soh was reaching for the contract in the depths of her bag, a newspaper cutting of the robot advertisement fell out. Before throwing the advertisement into the bin, she landed her foot on it, stomping it angrily. After that, she fished out the contract and started reading it again.

Mr Soh smiled haughtily at his wife and said, "I told you so. Humans are better." He then swiftly made a call.

"I finally understand," Mrs Soh replied as she pushed the robot into the storeroom and locked it up.

2020 P4 Preliminary Exams

Situational Writing – Formal Email

Dear Miss Pang,

I am Tina Gwee. I am writing to inform you about an incident that happened at school on 22 May 2020 at the basketball court.

I heard a girl, Mabel, remind a boy, Vincent, to take a plastic bottle with him and throw it into the recycling bin. Mabel thought Vincent was leaving and had forgotten about the plastic bottle. In response to Mabel's reminder, Vincent said that he would not take the bottle with him. They started to argue. I approached them and informed Mabel that there was no need to argue with him as I had seen him drink from the bottle as well.

I hope the details in this email will be useful as you look into the matter. Thank you for your attention.

Yours sincerely,
Tina Gwee

Situational Writing – Formal Email

NOTE:

- ensure the correct salutation & sign off
  - Dear Miss Pang
  - Yours sincerely,
  - Tina (+ surname)
  - remember the commas and the necessary capitalisation
  - flush all to the left side
- paragraphs with indentation
  - 3 paragraphs – one each for (i) suitable opening phrase or introduction [state purpose for writing] (ii) content or main text [answer for all the questions] (iii) suitable closing phrase/statement
- appropriate language to convey clear awareness of purpose, audience and context
  - the email must be formal in its tone
  - state the purpose clearly e.g. "I am writing to inform..."
  - read the detail in the visual carefully to correctly identify the key information required e.g. # 5 "Vincent said he would not take the bottle with him..."
  - write in complete sentences
    - no contractions or shortened words/sentences
    - exclamation marks are not to be used
    - be careful with the choice of words e.g. "persuade" vs "convince"
  - think the addressee of the end of the letter

Continuous Writing – A Wrong Decision

NOTE:

- write an effective introduction – recall PowerPoint slides
- (i) introduce the character/s (ii) establish the setting (iii) state the problem
- (iv) use a cointerjective i.e. adjectives; sound; thought; exciting action; flashback elaborate wherever relevant
- use the 3R + H to show, not tell
- make your description more vivid with the use of suitable adjective, adverbs, proverbs, metaphors
- end with an appropriate conclusion
- (i) provide (ii) a moral or a follow-up action undertaken by the (main) characters to ensure there will not be a repeat of the incident (iii) thought when using dialogue, remember to
  - (i) start a new paragraph for each person
  - (ii) punctuate correctly – refer to the handouts "8 Essential Rules for Punctuating Dialogue"
  - (iii) use it sparingly i.e. the entire composition must NOT be a conversation between the characters "saying" words
  - (iv) include all "saying" words
- Remember to
  - mention the topic explicitly i.e. a wrong decision – there must be only ONE decision
  - if you decide to use more than 1 picture, you MUST ensure that the story is based on the topic
  - with more planning, all the pictures provided can be combined to tell ONE story
- tick the picture used so that you will (i) stay focused on the topic (ii) remember to base your story on it – a severe penalty is imposed for compositions that reflect the topic but are not based on any of the pictures provided
- make clear reference to the picture that you have decided to base your story on – (i) be mindful of the details depicted in the picture (ii) use those details to make your story come alive as the details in the picture may be the impetus for any possible conflicts in your story
- use strategies/wander, [SW] to brainstorm the different possible storylines and story
- Minimum Planner [MP] to plan your story in greater detail
- consider if your ideas are (i) relevant (ii) developed (iii) interesting in order to obtain a better score for the Content component
- use all the prompts – these will provide the "skeleton" for your story
- include other relevant points – these will add the "meat" to your story.
- develop the story – (i) determine/critical when making the decision initially (ii) the consequences of the wrong decision

Areas For Improvement [A-F1]

- Introduction
  - do not waste time; mention the problem directly
  - recall the different ways to write an effective introduction
- rising actions & content/details
  - inject more suspense into your story, i.e. describe how the character is nearly caught doing the wrong thing in the first instance
  - describe the inner conflict/emotions/thoughts experienced by the character/s as he/she decides what to do in the situation
  - do not solve the conflict/problem immediately/predictably e.g. disquaffed after caught cheating
  - explore different ways of developing the story e.g. story written from the perspective of someone who was impacted by the wrong decision
  - details must be relevant i.e. those that move the story forward
- ending
  - write an appropriate conclusion to reiterate the logic or complete the story
  - avoid abrupt conclusions e.g. finish relating the incident before you are jolled back to the present (flashback)
  - explore different ways of writing a concluding paragraph e.g. That wrong decision has caused much trouble and anguish to my parents, they have yet to forgive me. How could I ask them for forgiveness – I have not forgiven myself.
  - avoid lengthy conclusion – remember, the longest part of the composition must be the body
- linkages, details & accuracy of events/developments
  - gaps in story – the main events must be clear in the story
  - details must be realistic e.g. the investigator was on her/his mobile phone throughout the paper (18); all the answers are in the book (18)
  - the bulk of the composition must be about the wrong decision – to elaborate and paint a vivid picture in the reader's mind; slow down and describe the scene frame-by-frame, incorporating the characters' thoughts, feelings & conflicts
- language – spelling, grammar & punctuation, sentence structures
  - remember your full stops & capitalisation and write them clearly
  - "Mum" or "Dad" to be used only within speech marks – use "mother" and "father"
  - no commas before "and" & "but"
  - begin your sentences with "However" instead of "but"
  - ...me and Myself... → .....Me's and I,....
- vocabulary & expressions
  - no informal words e.g. ditched, flunked, posse
  - choose the most appropriate word e.g. "asked" vs "questioned"
  - no shortened words e.g. MC → emcee; milk → microphone
  - no contractions e.g. didn't → did not
  - no Singsh, oven in dialogue
- writing style
  - when using flashback, (i) take care not to confuse the reader (ii) ensure a tie-in between the introduction and the conclusion
  - retain from using names and characteristics of friends and teachers in your composition – list your intent for misconstructed
  - avoid using real brands – list you be brought to court for slander and/or infringement of copyright

possible storylines:

- Picture 1 [Fixia]
  - had a yard sale
  - unwilling sold "old" books which were actually precious books belonging to great-grandmother
  - initially proud that you have helped clear the clutter in the house and thought it would be a surprise for your weedy mother
  - your mother came home and horrified that the books were sold
  - frated and regretted selling them before checking with your mother
  - mother gave you the cold shoulder and you regretted the wrong decision
  - the buyer came back after a few days to return the books upon realizing their value
  - buyer desined your offer to return the money
  - you gave an audible sign of relief as you closed the door, eager to update your mother
- Picture 2 [Ovia]
  - after some deliberation, decided to learn a few tricks to be part of the "cool" gang
  - took time to learn tricks and managed to persuade members of the "cool" gang to accept you as a member
  - performed stunts on the bicycle
  - succesidin the beginning but ended up seriously hurt but none of them showed concern or care
  - as you recuperated in the hospital, you regretted going to that length to impress the members of the "cool" gang
- Picture 3 [Emma]
  - secured a job interview after many months of job-hunting as you prepared yourself for it; received news that a beloved family member is seriously ill
  - after much deliberation, decided to attend the interview and visit her later
  - sent her a note to apologise for not being able to visit her soon
  - received news that she has passed on
  - looking back, regretted postponing not seeing her in her final days as family is more important than anything else
